There is hardly a question that some rate of increase will be approved in the committee meeting. During this time she had an excellent opportunity of observing the actions of two white men and a negro who were at the station, and she told the officers to-day that she was positive she could identify the three men wherever she might see them. The two white men were looking at a photograph when one of them said: "Well, we might as well buy a ticket." They purchased a single trip ticket to Waverly, and this ticket, the nurse says, she saw handed to the negro by one of the white men as they passed out of the depot, although the white men and the negro previously manifested no sign of recognition.

An iron bar was found to-day at the edge of Handyside Pond, in Waverly, in which, it is claimed by some, the murderer of Saturday night went to wash his hands. The bar is two feet long and a little rusty. It was on the edge of the pond, and the drawing off of the water brought it to light.

IDENTIFIED MASON.

During the afternoon a Mrs. Sayres, from Watertown, called at the Cambridge jail and told Sheriff Fairbairn that she wanted to see Allan G. Mason, because she believed from the picture which had appeared in the newspapers that he was the man who had annoyed her last summer in a library room in city. Mason again was placed in a line with other innates of the jail, and, with them, was subjected to a rigid scrutiny As in the case of the Nemers Identification, Mrs. Sayres was permitted to give no sign or say a word, but after she re-turned to the sheriff's office, she declared that the fourth man in line was the man who had annoyed her. The fourth man was Mason.

This adds a new feature to the case, as it recalls another "Jack the slugger" case, in which John C. Soderquest was convicted of assault with intent to kill Miss R. A. Roquett, on August 30th, in the same library building referred to by Mrs. Sayres. Soderquest was the jani-tor of the building, and for the crime the man is now serving a sentence of sever years. The belief was expressed at the years. The belief was expressed at the time that Soderquest pleared guilty that he was responsible for the many mysterious assaults on young women in Cam-bridge and Brookline, who were beaten on the head with some iron weapon just as Miss Morton and Miss McPhee were State police are now investigating the story of Mrs. Sayres in comparison with the more important details of the Soderquest affair.
